Dr. Gert Bronfort has been a leader in research for over 25 years, investigating conservative and integrative care for disabling and costly musculoskeletal pain conditions. He has long been a proponent of interdisciplinary collaboration, forming numerous regional, national and international partnerships to conduct innovative, high impact patient-oriented research. He has led numerous federally funded randomized clinical trials investigating manual therapies, exercise and self-care and has authored several high profile systematic reviews.

As well as serving on the CBRG Editorial Board for 10 years, Dr. Bronfort has been a long-standing member of the Cervical Overview Group that has authored a number of Cochrane reviews on treatments for neck pain. He has served on several national and international committees including the Advisory Council for the National Center for Complementary and Alternative Medicine, the World Health Organization and the U.S. Health Resources and Services Administrations' Advisory Committee on Interdisciplinary, Community-Based Linkages.
